TRINITY THEATRE NEWSLETTER October 2013

President's Notes

The Caucasian Chalk Circle will have finished its run by now and what a great production it was. Brecht sees theatre differently and it was certainly a challenge which everyone on and off the stage worked very hard on. It provided a great evening of thought provoking entertainment. This was a real credit to Trinity Theatre showing we are able to produce a wide variety of entertainment and have the talent to succeed in taking on challenging shows. Well done to Gwen and her hard working cast of actors and off-stage crew.

Rehearsals for Scrooge-The Panto are well underway for the show in early December. Unfortunately there was less good news for the auditions for The Business of Murder. There was a very poor attendance for the auditions so this play will not take place in January.

Looking forward to next year, the Rogers & Hammerstein musical Carousel will be performed in late April and early May. The show will be produced by Daphne Brown and Alex Quilter.

The Isle of Wight Literary Festival is happening again in October. We will be hosting Simon Hoggart, the political sketch writer and Tim Brooke-Taylor, the 'ex-Goodie'.

Saturday 12th October sees a Fun Quiz Night, come along and test you grey matter, everyone welcome. The social programme continues with November 23rd seeing both the Christmas Fayre during the day and Honest Mike's Race Night in the evening.

The first Film@Trinity Theatre showing went well with forty people attending. There is a great range of films coming up so come along and enjoy the Trinity film experience.

Preparations for the work to fill in the windows on the north elevation is underway. We have selected the contractor and are looking to start in early October.

As you can see from the diary there is plenty happening at the theatre so come along and get involved in what's on.

Centenary Celebration

2014 sees the centenary of Trinity Hall, now known as Trinity Theatre. It would be nice to put together an entertainment of some sort to celebrate the occasion. This could be a review, concert or anything else appropriate. We do need someone to come forward and coordinate this production so if you have some ideas and would like get involved please contact any committee member.
